

Anew is an international space agency and estate firm capable of discovering new and exciting planets and performing testing for elements of human habitability on said planets.

Anew's two rovers explore planets and report data on humidity levels, temperature, light levels, and the presence of unobtainium to mission control. This data is mapped and recorded for future missions to fuel sales.

